Good Morning All:

Hope you were able to view/enjoy/nap through my video from yesterday. Today there is no new information. Yesterday was good enough. Later today I will have a practice quiz available for you to try. Again, the struggle could very well be how to but the results in such that the "stupid" unthinking and unconscious computer is able to identify a correct response. I guess this means spelling counts!

I would like to experiment with a technical item today. I have heard that a phone can be used as a scanner to pdf. You would need to find an app that you can download and install. I would like you to try this and then scan three lewis dot diagrams of your own creation. They should be for:

Of course it is not hard to find these somewhere on yay old website and I would do that after you have tried to do them yourself.

Please see if you can email me a pdf of these diagrams as an attachment. If you cannot solve this technical riddle, then send me a picture instead, again attached to an email. I am thinking ahead here as to how we might complete this course with the feedback that you need and this may be the route.

I will be available all day for questions.

The check in today has a few extra questions!

Have a good day.
